

Presentation will put spotlight on Nobscot and its library

Posted Jun 13, 2011 @ 05:37 PM

FRAMINGHAM —

Interested in Nobscot's history and the public library's place on the Northside? The library invites the public to a program on "Understanding Nobscot's Past; Building its Future."

The presentation is Tuesday from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Heritage at Framingham, 747 Water St. Speakers are set to include Grace Corrigan, whose daughter Christa McAuliffe grew up going to the branch library in Saxonville.

Library trustees hope to move the branch, which was later named after McAuliffe, from Saxonville to Nobscot, across from Heritage, next to the village shopping center.

Trustee Sam Klaidman will discuss the project, while architectural historian Amy Finstein will detail the history and evolution of the Nobscot neighborhood and library buildings in the area.

Corrigan will talk about raising her daughter in Nobscot/Saxonville and what the local library meant to her.

<http://www.framinghamlibrary.org/>

Copyright 2011 The Framingham Tab. Some rights reserved